

FREE REPORT: THE REAL REASON WHY WOMEN AREN'T SLEEPING WITH YOU

Hey Guys,

I get it, you're single and ready to mingle, but you still can't seem to seal the deal. This means you're in one of two categories. You're either "Watcher" or a "Pusher."

Watchers are the quintessential Nice Guys.

They're so afraid of offending a girl, being rejected or getting a drink tossed in their face that they won't make the initial approach. Watchers prefer to meet women online since they don't have to practice the learned skill of approaching a woman in public.

Pushers, on the other hand, have no problem making the approach. But Pushers' downfall is they aren't reading the subtle signals women give off which show their interest or disinterest in continuing a conversation after the initial contact has been made.

Whether you're a Watcher, a Pusher, or somewhere in between, if women aren't sleeping with you, here are 7 possible reasons why:

1. Your body language is off.

You don't know if she likes you, so you play it cool – so cool that it puts you in the dreaded “friend zone” after your first date. By simply touching her hand or shoulder, particularly at a time when she doesn't expect it, can make her see you in a different way and shows interest. If she responds, you're golden. If she moves away, you may need to move on.

2. Your place is a pigsty.

Sorry, but women aren't turned on by a sink full of dishes or potato chips stuck between couch cushions. If you think you might end up back at your place, clean and deodorize before you leave the house. Some nice throw pillows couldn't hurt either. Make it look like you give a damn about where you sleep.

3. You don't dress sexy.

When you're on a date, you have to find the balance between looking too stuffy and looking too sloppy. If you're coming from work, take off the tie and undo the first few two buttons of your shirt so she knows you're there for pleasure, not business. (Though it'd be better if you changed completely to get fully out of that work headspace that can linger when you wear the same clothes.)

Even though the other guys may look casual at the bar, you'll stand out if you kick it up a notch. Just by adding a sharp, tailored blazer over your T-shirt and jeans you can turn heads in your direction.

4. You're boring her.

Women are tired of going out on cookie-cutter dates. Asking her small-talk, interview questions like, "What do you do for work?" or "How many siblings do you have?" will ensure that you fade into obscurity.

Instead, ask questions that require an emotional response or a story like, “What’s the most embarrassing thing that happened to you as a kid?” or “What was your first concert?” and you’ll have a woman melt like putty in your hands.

5. You bust her chops.

Players and pick-up artists have convinced men that it’s a good idea to insult a woman to get her attention. Sure, you might get her attention, but not in the right way. There’s a reason behind the saying that you catch more bees with honey than you do with vinegar.

You’ll get further along faster by approaching a woman with a simple, “Hi, my name is…” and then complimenting her on something she’s wearing or her smile — never her breasts. Never by insulting her.

6. You don’t make her feel special.

When guys have a one-track mind, women can feel it. Let her know how special and unique she is by telling AND showing her. Compliments, listening, and asking questions are the keys to any woman’s heart.

7. You're too forward.

Unless she is so drunk that she won't remember it, most women hate the bump-and-grind approach. Getting touchy-feely too early on will make her think you're a creep. Let her know you're interested with warm eye contact, smiling, and casual touching if she lets you. That means her shoulder or her hand, not her butt.

Whichever side of the spectrum you're on, these tips can make a woman crazy for you and keep you sane in the process.
